Welcome New Member!

Welcome to Resilience Alexandria, Alexandria's Trauma-Informed Community Network! This guide was developed to ensure that all new network members have same basic network history and context. We look forward to working with you!

Trauma Defined

3 E's: Event, Experience, Effects

Trauma refers to experiences that cause intense physical and psychological stress reactions. It can refer to a single event, multiple events, or a set of circumstances that is experienced by an individual as physically and emotionally harmful or threatening and that has lasting adverse effects on the individual's physical, social, emotional, or spiritual well-being (SAMHSA, 2014).

What does it mean to be trauma-informed?

4 R's: Realize, Recognize, Respond, And Resist Re-traumatizing

A program, organization, or system that is trauma-informed:

- Realizes the widespread impact of trauma and understands potential paths for recovery;
- Recognizes the signs and symptoms of trauma in clients, families, staff, and others involved with the system;
- Responds by fully integrating knowledge about trauma into policies, procedures, and practices; and
- Seeks to actively resist re-traumatization

A trauma-informed approach can be implemented in any type of service setting or organization (SAMHSA, 2014).

What are Trauma-Informed Community Networks?

Throughout Virginia, there are more than 26 communities coming together across disciplines around trauma-informed care. Most often in Virginia, these groups form as trauma-informed community networks (TICNs). Every TICN looks different because they are built by the local community, however, in each of these communities, these networks share common characteristics. They:

- Build a stronger, more resilient trauma-informed community,

- Increase awareness of trauma and adverse childhood experiences (ACEs) and identify areas that the group can collectively build upon,
- Develop a shared language about trauma and resilience,
- Help organizations to become trauma informed, conduct trainings, support, and implement new practices in schools, courts, and community services,
- Create a mechanism for collaboration, and the sharing of information and resources,
- and much more.

These TICNs help to connect practice across disciplines and help to identify gaps and how policies can be implemented. Virginia's community networks play a key role in advancing trauma-informed policy and promoting a statewide policy agenda. About Resilience Alexandria

Alexandria's Trauma Informed Community Network (TICN) is located in Alexandria, Virginia; the City is bordered by the District of Columbia, Arlington and Fairfax counties. Established in July 2019, Alexandria's TICN aims to build a more equitable, safe, trauma-informed and resilient Alexandria by informing, supporting and elevating our community. Hence its name, Resilience Alexandria: Inform. Support. Elevate. (RAISE)

Common Vision

In July 2019, Alexandria's TICN held its first meeting and members were asked to 1. Identify sources of trauma in Alexandria, 2. Vote on a name for the network, and 3. Articulate its purpose. We used this information to develop our shared vision for change, as well as our membership.

Within a few short months of its origin, RAISE members developed their mission statement and subcommittees to ensure a unified approach to building healthier and more resilient communities. The RAISE mission is to build a more trauma-informed and resilient Alexandria by informing, supporting and elevating our community.

Priorities

RAISE members were asked to use their lived experience and expertise to identify sources of trauma that are specific to Alexandria. Based on those sources, four following priorities drive RAISE's mission:

1. Inform Alexandria's community and various sectors about RAISE and its mission to build a more trauma-informed and resilient Alexandria;
2. Support community members and professionals by delivering trainings focused on ACEs, trauma, and resilience, and
3. Support organizations becoming trauma-informed by providing them with technical assistance in transforming their spaces, policies, and procedures; and finally
4. Elevate our community's needs and voice through advocacy at the micro and macro levels.

Committees

These priorities and RAISE's current capacity resulted in the following committees which guide RAISE's strategic direction:

- Communications & Awareness Committee: Build community awareness of RAISE.
- Training Committee: Deliver trainings focused on ACEs, trauma, and resilience.
- Changing Environments Committee: Provide assessments and resources for organizations wanting to transform their spaces into trauma-informed environments.

Each of these subcommittees have developed their own action plans that will guide future work and evaluate progress.

Backbone Organization and Strong Leadership

The Center for Children and Families (CCF) within the City of Alexandria's Department of Community and Human Services (DCHS) serves as the TICN's direct backbone organization. CCF is responsible for oversight of the City's Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault programs including the City's DV shelter. CCF is a recognized leader and resource in the City when it comes to the complexity of family, domestic and intimate partner violence.

CCF convenes RAISE partners on a monthly basis, fostering connections, and driving change in order to push and sustain large-scale collaborative efforts. Within DCHS, CCF provides the infrastructure through dedicated staff and ongoing engagement of partners to ensure that everyone remains connected to an overarching purpose, efforts are maximized, work and accomplishments are shared, and duplication of effort is avoided.

Equitable Membership and Authentic Engagement

In every step of the process, partners with lived experience in primary and secondary trauma have been engaged as equal partners while designing RAISE's structure and common vision. When RAISE was established, 60 members representing 21 different organizations and programs across the city were asked to use their lived or professional experience and expertise to consider the various sources of trauma that impact Alexandrians.

From that activity, members determined that 74% of trauma in Alexandria comes from either childhood trauma (20%), economic trauma (14%), immigrant/refugee trauma (15%), racial trauma (7%) and the trauma experienced while interacting within a system - either as an individual seeking services or as a staff member experiencing secondary trauma (18%).

Members also shared trauma-informed efforts already occurring across the city, voted on a name for the TICN, identified key elements to include in RAISE - such as trainings and the sharing of resources, updates of local trauma-informed efforts, and networking opportunities - developed the mission, goals, and subcommittees, and have been "trauma champions" in their communities and workplaces.

RAISE members agree that membership is instrumental to being a strong network and is something that everyone can help build and maintain to honor the diversity in the room. Members are encouraged to extend the RAISE invitation to their interns. For members who can't physically attend meetings, they have the option of contributing their ideas through surveys and by inviting RAISE Coordinators to meet them where they are, such as community meetings and events, to engage community members about ACEs, trauma, and resilience.

Members have frequently expressed feeling energized, empowered as service providers, and more connected to Alexandria's network of resources after our monthly meetings.

Governance Structure

RAISE's governance structure supports cross-agency and cross-sector decision-making to ensure forward progress.

Statewide TICN: RAISE is dedicated to collaborating and coordinating with statewide trauma-informed activities, and does so by attending statewide TICN and policy partners meetings, and participating in statewide efforts, like sending constituents to the Childhood Trauma and Resilience Summit, advocacy day, and submitting stories of our efforts to the Statewide TICN Showcase. A member of Voices for Virginia's Children attends RAISE meetings to provide statewide policy updates and opportunities for advocacy.

RAISE Co-Coordinator: The DCHS Director of the Center for Children and Families and the Coordinator of the City's Children and Youth Master Plan provide STABLE and CONSISTENT backbone support and coordination to RAISE. They use their positions to leverage opportunities to connect and align the trauma-informed efforts of the many agencies their work intersects with daily.

Subcommittees: Each of the RAISE subcommittees are populated with staff from across agencies and sectors. Every month, time on the RAISE agenda is dedicated to subcommittees meeting with their members to discuss activities, progress, and decisions that are specific to their committee's responsibilities and work plans. Actions and decisions are then reported out to the full group at the end of the meeting. Chairs of Subcommittees are responsible for providing committee leadership, communicating with RAISE Co-Coordinators, and managing committee tasks outside of RAISE meetings.

Members: RAISE members help to build and maintain the membership base to honor the diversity of RAISE.

Established Measurement Practices

Accountability is paramount to RAISE. We believe in data-driven decision-making that allows us to efficiently determine if we are “moving the needle” when it comes to reducing violence and traumatic or adverse experiences. We also are committed to using data to determine when we need to correct our course or make other alterations in our direction that better serve our workforce and community.

Plans are for RAISE to adopt Results-Based Accountability (RBA) as its guiding data-driven, decision-making structure and its “turn the curve” thinking as follows:

Continuous Communication

RAISE includes a Communications Subcommittee tasked with building awareness about the network and its mission to build a more trauma-informed and resilient community. This Subcommittee will develop a communications plan to ensure our network's communication to our partners and broader community is consistent, frequent, and authentic and allows opportunities for feedback and questions about our process.

Currently, RAISE has a webpage on the City's website, providing more information about Alexandria's TICN and how to get involved. All meeting materials, notes, agendas, announcements, advocacy opportunities and updates, etc. is communicated monthly to members from the RAISE Coordinator.

Meetings

Resilience Alexandria meets virtually on the 4th Thursday of every other month from 10:00-12:00.

All meetings are open for anyone to attend, though we do send out an Outlook Calendar invitation via our mailing list so we know generally how many people to expect at each meeting.

What can you do as a member?

- Attend network meetings to:
 - learn about trauma-informed initiatives across the county
 - share what is going on in your agency or organization related to trauma-informed care implementation
 - meet like-minded professionals and neighbors, and to identify resources to bring back to your agency or community
 - Engage with other network members, and learn about upcoming events
- Attend RAISE trainings, and promote them to your colleagues and neighbors
- Help set-up trainings and Resilience or Broken Places screenings for audiences within your sphere of influence
- Develop a strategy to communicate within your own agency or organization about trauma-informed initiatives in the county
- Share materials with your agency, neighborhood (community centers, etc.), conferences and other settings where it makes sense to spread the word about trauma & resilience
- Stay up to date on trainings, events and other information by joining the RAISE Mailing List (email RAISE@alexandriava.gov to join)
- As your role allows, advocate for trauma-informed policies at the agency, county, state and federal government levels (you will learn what those opportunities might be from attending network meetings and reading RAISE communications)
